Donald J. Trump
President
United States of America

Dear Mr. President:

We are U.S. religious institutions, faith-based organizations and organizations with long-standing ties to faith communities engaged with partners throughout the world. We write in support of the State Department's Office of Religion and Global Affairs.

Religion plays a vital role in every society; and religious leaders, institutions, and constituents have a tremendous impact on national policies. The Office of Religion and Global Affairs serves as an irreplaceable focal point where U.S. Government officials can deepen their own knowledge of religious actors and help foster relationships with and across religious communities. In today's world such engagement is more critical than ever.

The Office of Religion and Global Affairs serves U.S. policy goals and assists our organizations in many ways, such as:

- opening doors for our partners around the globe to meet with administration officials who are decision makers in the development of policies that directly affect their countries and communities;
- making it possible to bring our experience from troubled regions of the world to the attention of State Department decision-makers, serving as a critical link between concerned U.S. people of faith who live or work outside of the U.S. and U.S. officials interested in supporting effective solutions to global challenges;
- helping reduce and/or avert violence in global conflict areas by engaging the perspectives and on-the-ground experience of U.S. faith communities and our partners abroad;
- developing a sophisticated understanding of global religions and religious actors so as to provide in depth analysis and information to help shape nuanced U.S. policy approaches and responses;
- convening discussions on how State Department personnel can engage with local FBOs in conflict/humanitarian crises affecting our partner religious communities in around the world;
- providing crucial information that helps us galvanize support to advance U.S. foreign policies of importance to people of faith in the U.S. and our partners around the world;
- promoting religious freedom for persecuted minorities;
- staffing the Secretary's Religion and Foreign Policy Working Group, which, with its partners in civil society, brings a voice of moral authority to the humanitarian foreign policy hopes of the United States, encourages addressing the needs of those at the margins of society, including women and ethnic minorities, and is a voice for democracy and democratic participation.

The State Department's Office of Religion and Global Affairs serves America well and is a valued nexus between U.S. policy makers and people of faith in addressing international concerns. We look forward to continuing to work with the Office under your presidency, and we ask that the Office be kept in its current form and location at State.

Thank you and blessings.
